Brief summary of the event in around 100 words (purpose, conduct, feedback, impact, suggestions)	A guest lecture on “Doctor–Patient Relationship: Past, Present & Future” was organized by the institution for faculty members, postgraduate residents, and interns. The session was delivered by Dr. Ivan Netto, Ex-Professor in Psychiatry, BJMC, Pune, who provided an academic perspective on the evolution and contemporary dimensions of the doctor–patient relationship. The lecture emphasized the significance of effective communication, empathy, mutual trust, professional ethics, patient autonomy, and shared decision-making in clinical practice. The changing dynamics of healthcare delivery, including the impact of digital health, telemedicine, and artificial intelligence, were also discussed. The session provided an opportunity for participants to reflect upon the evolving responsibilities of healthcare professionals while reaffirming the centrality of patient-centered and compassionate care. The programme was well received and contributed meaningfully to the academic and professional development of the participants. 79 participants
