Brief summary of the event in around 100 words (purpose, conduct, feedback, impact, suggestions)	The Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology hosted a talk during Cervical Cancer Awareness Month titled Cervical Cancer: An Ounce of Prevention, A Pound of Cure . Dr. Sushma Sharma, Professor and HOU, emphasized aligning with WHO's goal to eliminate cervical cancer by 2110 and reduce its occurrence by 2030. She highlighted primary prevention through HPV vaccination, recommended for girls and boys aged 9–14, with different schedules for women aged 15–45. The postpartum period was identified as an opportunity for awareness. Secondary prevention via cervical screening (Pap smear, liquid-based cytology) was also discussed. Dr. Vaishali Korde, HOD, urged caregivers to promote vaccination and screening. The audience responded positively to the session. Dr. Korde encouraged everyone to actively promote HPV vaccination among students and raise awareness. She also highlighted that the vaccine is available at a lower cost within the institute.
